PRODUCT DESCRIPTION

William Mackenzie, a farmer from the Speyside town of Carron, built the Dailuaine distillery in 1852. Dailuaine derives from the Gaelic 'An dail uaine' meaning 'green valley'. After William passed away in 1865, James Fleming, a banker from nearby Aberlour leased the distillery. Between 1884 and 1887 Flemming rebuilt and expanded the distillery, making Dailuaine one of the largest distilleries in the Highlands at that time. After a fire in 1917, the distillery was forced to close, but opened again in 1920. The second expansion in the distillery's history was in 1960, when the distillery expanded from four to six stills. Just like many other distilleries, Dailuaine became part of industry giant Diageo when United Distillers and International Distillers & merged in 1998.
